Dear [redacted]

Your letter of December 6, 1977, to the Attorney General, concerning a Pastor Jim Jones, has been referred to the Criminal Division.

In recent years the Department of Justice has received numerous complaints from the distressed parents of members of various religious sects, alleging that their adult children are the victims of "brainwashing" by leaders of these groups. Typically, the parents allege that new members are subjected to intensive indoctrination accompanied by inadequate amounts of food and sleep with the result that they become "programmed" to obey the wishes and commands of the sect leaders, and cease thinking for themselves.

would be viewed in leaving no basis for this expectation

Initially, I would like to point out that the First Amendment's protection of religious freedom is not limited to the traditional and well established religions. This protection applies to all religions and embraces the right to maintain religious beliefs which are rank heresy to followers of traditional faiths. In view of these constitutional protections, the Department of Justice cannot conduct a general inquiry into the activities of any religious group. Any investigation must be based on an allegation of a violation of Federal law.

In your letter, you allege that a loved one and others are being held in bondage in Georgetown, Guyana by Pastor Jim Jones. This allegation, by itself, does not indicate a violation of Federal law. However, if you are in possession of any additional information which might indicate a Federal violation, I urge you to furnish this information to the nearest office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Since your letter indicates that United States citizens are being held against their will in a foreign country, I am forwarding a copy of your letter to the Department of State.

I hope this information will be of some assistance to you.

Sincerely,

BENJAMIN R. CIVILETTI
Assistant Attorney General
Criminal Division

Dear Mr. Bradley,

I've heard you like to help all you could. The people, [illegible] People's Temple, is now settling in Guyana, So. Amer. (Jungle Dwell).

This man has my dear one and other's dear ones held in bondage over there.

All I ask of you, is that if you would help us. Please investigate on this matter & let people and myself know if appreciate it.
